J. W. BAILEY, Editor.

"Principles Change, Men Never!"

Such is modern demeracy. We find it written in almost every locofoco sheet we see

Popular sovereignty is butchered, and every sentiment squelched that has even the faintest leaning toward democracy of 1848. After

Douglas was nominated, Gen. Sherman and many other orators of the lesser fry, stumped it through this county, and fairly glorified over the disruption of their national convention.

Said they, "we are glad we are rid of these secessionists—their departure will strengthen us here in the North. You Republicans can no longer charge our party with being in league with, and under the control of them." But Republicans didn't believe their stories, for they had been deceived once, and the sequel has proven that they would have been deceived again. But we propose, merely, to notice "this last jump." Every demagogue, who reads the papers, has undoubtedly read the speech of Senator Brooks, of the Illinois legislature. We quote one paragraph:

"With us the Union stands above party.—Satisfy us that it will preserve the Union to exact laws in Congress in favor of slavery in the States, and that it can be preserved in no other way, and we are for it. We are for anything that can be done peacefully to preserve the Union and it can be preserved in no other way but peacefully. It doesn't matter if we have to give up every principle we have advocated as a democrat in the Union. How is it with the Republicans? Can they say as much? Dare they say? Or do they love their party more than they love the Union?"

Mr. B. is Douglas' right hand, and as such is entitled to due consideration. In fact the sentiment is drawn from Douglas' own speech.

How beautifully this jibes with popular sovereignty and the right of self-government! It is a complete willingness to put the Breckinridge platform in the Constitution, and surrender every jot of sovereign right. Yes, it is more than that—a willingness to "enact laws in Congress in favor of slavery in the States!" Will not Yancy, Toombs & Co.

say: "Well done, good and faithful servants, you have done all that we could have asked. A traitor is now the test of Southern democracy, and we are glad to see you thus manfully coming up to our standard!" It is evident that the Douglas leaders have already been dragged into far more extreme positions than any dared to avow before the late election, but it is questionable whether the great mass of Union-loving voters of the North will be caught in the trap at proposed to "sacrifice every thing for the Union."

The Constitution, as it is, has proved itself sufficient for all previous emergencies, and we doubt not, will in the future. Punish those who violate it, and we shall soon have peace

Southern Freight.

The disturbed state of affairs at the South is already turning the tide of business North, and the great lines of railroad, as well as the Northern cities, are reaping rich rewards from secession. Cotton in large quantities is not only being shipped from the Mississippi river over the inland routes to New York, but from the Atlantic coasts of Charleston and Savannah. The latter is sent to New York via Knoxville, Lynchburg, Gordonsville, Alexandria, The Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland road is crowded with freight that formerly took the Baltimore and Ohio route. This goes to illustrate the fact that commerce is very sensitive, and per force seeks safe channels for transportation.

Fort Pickens.

There has been much doubt as to the real strength of the force of Fort Pickens, and the great lines of railroad, as well as the Northern cities, are reaping rich rewards from secession. Cotton in large quantities is not only being shipped from the Mississippi river over the inland routes to New York, but from the Atlantic coasts of Charleston and Savannah. The latter is sent to New York via Knoxville, Lynchburg, Gordonsville, Alexandria, The Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland road is crowded with freight that formerly took the Baltimore and Ohio route. This goes to illustrate the fact that commerce is very sensitive, and per force seeks safe channels for transportation.

Its present garrison consists, as far as we can ascertain with certainty, of 83 soldiers. Some seafarers have been sent to it from the steamer Wyandotte and the store ship Supply. It is supposed that they could not spare more than fifty men. If this supposition is correct, the garrison does not exceed 133 men.

The arrival of naval reinforcements, already announced, materially aids the gallant commander, and has doubtless thrown confusion and dismay into the hands of marauders who have been threatening the fortress.

Threats against Fort Sumter.

A. C. Garlington, one of Gov. Pickens' cabinet, in a speech one day last week used the following words:

"Let me tell the gentleman, Fort Sumter must fall—yes, sir, it must fall! This is the deliberate purpose of South Carolina. It must fall! [Great sensation.] This I utter in full consciousness of what I say, and I hope the announcement may go to the world.—Having no other way of getting it to the world and desiring to favor the wishes of the gentleman, I am disposed to trust the matter with you to execute the desire. Garlington further declared that every preparation was being made for all contingencies that may arise—that a corps of engineers were at this time considering the subject of taking the fort.

—Compromise—an exchange of the best part of my principles for the worst part of yours.

"LIBERTY AND UNION, ONE AND INSEPARABLE!"

(From the Evening Post.)

There floats our glorious ensign,
There still our eagles fly!
And lives the coward heart or hand
Dare pluck them from the sky?

Dare raise the pariahal arm
With impious grasp to seize,
And tear from out the firmament
The glory of the breeze?

The curse of Cain on him who wields
The brand of civil war,
Or blots from that proud galaxy
One single gleaming star.

Still floats our glorious ensign,
Still our eagles soar,
And tear from out the firmament
The glory of the breeze?

Oh! brethren in the Union strong,
Behold ye of the day
When our lives, beneath that banner,
Roused to fight the fray.

When first the glories were unfurled
O'er Freedom's red stream,
And thirteen States confederate stood,
In loyal union bound.

Its stripes were dyed at Monmouth;
In Brandywine's red stream;
On Saratoga's trampled plain;
By Lexington's and Green.

It is a relic of our grandeur's height;
Fort Mead's red stream;
And high o'er Yorktown's hallowed camp,
They flashed in dazzling light.

Rise! souls of martyred heroes,
Rise from your troubled graves,
And guard once more our Union—
Our sacred country save!

Rise, Stark, from old New Hampshire,
Rise, Lincoln, from the West,
Rise, Sumner, from the rice fields,
As on that glorious day.

Again o'er broad Saratoga
Rise Marion's avenging brigade,
And high o'er Yorktown's hallowed camp,
They flashed in dazzling light.

Why now sleep Henry's patriot heart,
Why Otis' tongue of flame?
Hark! and live, and live forever,
Or live they but in name?

They cannot die immortal truth
Outlasts the shock of time,
And guard our Union's hallowed camp,
They flashed in dazzling light.

They live! on every hill and plain,
By every gleaming river,
Where'er their plowing furrows tread,
They live, and live forever.

The memory of the past shall raise
Fresh allies to their name;
And come ye forth, ye warriors of the past,
Protect the sacred flame.

We know no North, nor South, nor West,
One Union binds us all;
Its stars and stripes are our ensign—
"North them we'll stand, or fall."

Then stay your hands, ye traitor host,
And cease your vain endeavor;
God guard our Union's hallowed camp,
Forever and forever.

He sleeps not like heroes dead,
And mouldering in the grave;
His outstretched arm is quick to smite,
Occupied to save.

Let the shall break the coward hand,
And smite the traitor's name;
With more than Arnold's traitorous shame—
With his accursed grave. P. A. H.

Seek not thy Bride in midnight halls.

Seek not thy bride in midnight halls,
The beauty's here, many a looking glass
Think not the smile more sweetly falls
"Noddy" smiles and sparkling eyes
Around thy three unchangeable gold,
Faint hope there rears her golden head,
The lips forget the vows they told.

Go seek her "mid the quiet shades
Of home—where pure affection dwells!
There find thy love,
